As per a press release issued by the college, a total of 11 trainees — that included the first group of the college's alumni and faculty — took part in the training.

'Galaincha' is a rug and textile designing software developed by Alternative Technology. And the training aimed to enhance the capability of designers and empower them by imparting additional inputs of "technology assisted designing" as per the press statement.

Meanwhile, Gyani Shova Tuladhar, Founder Principal of NCFT, Dr Jyoti Tandukar, CEO of Alternative Technology and Neelima Sharma, President of AANCFT awarded the trainees with a certificate on completion of the training.

The programme concluded with a display of individual designs created by the trainees using the Galaincha software. It was followed by a question answer session. — HNS
